The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 43-56, and 59-64 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Favstritsky et al. 4,966,716 in view of Yu et al. 5,670,055. Favstritsky et al. disclose (see col. 5 line 15 through col. 8 line 2, and col. 8 line 45) a method for controlling bacterial growth in a wastewater system substantially as claimed. The claims differ from Favstritsky et al. by reciting that a specific biocide is added or contacted with the system. Yu et al disclose (see col. 2 line 21 through col. 4 line 67) that it is known in the art to add the recited biocide to an aqueous system to aid in controlling the growth of bacterial biomass in the aqueous system. It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art to modify the method of Favstritsky et al. by addition of the recited biocide in view of the teachings of Yu et al., to aid in controlling growth of the biomass in the system. The specific amount of biocide added, would have been an obvious matter of process optimization to one skilled in the art, depending on the specific aqueous system treated and results desired, absent a sufficient showing of unexpected results.

Claim 57 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Favstritsky et al. 4,966,716 in view of Yu et al. 5,670,055 as above, and further in view of Jones et al. 6,784,168. The claim differs from the references as applied above, by reciting that the biocide is formulated with one or more specific components. Jones et al. disclose (see col. 2 line 21 through col. 4 line 67, and col. 9 lines 4-30) that it is known in the art to add a composition including the recited biocide with the recited components to an aqueous system, to aid in inhibiting growth of bacteria in aqueous systems. It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art to modify the references as applied above, by addition of the recited components in view of the teachings of Jones et al., to aid in controlling growth of the biomass in the system.

Claims 43-57 and 59-64 are directed to an invention not patentably distinct from claims 33-56 of commonly assigned 10/559,969, claims 37-53, 58, and 60-68 of commonly assigned 11/630,604, and claims 35-66 of commonly assigned 11/793,303. Specifically, the method steps recited in the instant claims appear to be included in the claims of the copending applications. It is submitted that the biomass recited in instant claim 43 is considered patentably indistinguishable from the sewage sludge recited in claim 33 of 10/559,969 or claim 35 of 11/793,303, or the sludge recited in claim 37 of 11/630,604. It is further submitted that the amount of biocide added in instant claim 43 would appear to reduce pathogen content in 10/559,969 and 11/793,303, and reduce sludge bulking as in claim 37 of 11/630,604.

Since there is no showing of common ownership at the time the instant invention was made in the instant application, the assignee is required to either (a) Name the first inventor of conflicting subject matter under 102(f) or (g), or show the inventions of the applications were commonly owned at the time the instant invention was made in accordance with MPEP 804.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(f) he did not himself invent the subject matter sought to be patented.

Claims 43-57 and 59-64 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(f)/103a because the applicant did not invent the claimed subject matter. It is submitted that applications 10/559,969, 11/630,604, and 11/793,303 appear to present evidence that the inventive entity in the instant application did not invent the subject matter recited in the instant claims. It would have been obvious to one skilled in the art that the sludge disclosed in 10/559,969, 11/630,604, 11/793,303 would include biomass formed in a wastewater treatment plant used for the treatment of industrial or municipal effluent, and the amounts of biocide added in the above applications would control bacterial growth as in the instant process.
